

Abstract

Any reaction between the international units is coming from the characteristics of the units that may cause cooperation, struggle or competition. All those characteristics will affect positively or negatively on the international policies.

This study focused on the foreign policies of the Gulf Cooperation Council states toward Iraq after the fall down of Iraq regime in April 2003 . This policy has got great importance for who deals with international affairs.