

Abstract

Political developments in Iraqi Kurdistan, for the period between (1991-2009)

Alamein Institute of Higher Studies in 2016 Najaf :

The Kurdish issue in the middle east and mainly in northern Iraq is one of the main issues that the new world order is deciding with it in the present time. This concern is represent in the involvement of the united nations in maintaining security and peace for the Kurdish minority in northern Iraq through the resolution of the security council number (688) in 1991

The study concludes the following results:

- 1- In the new world order international organizations media civil society and federal regions become as new players in the new world order .
- 2- Also the new concept of sovereignty emerges in the new world order by which the absolute and comprehensive character of sovereignty undermined.
- 3- The security council resolution number 688 in 1991 considers as a turning joined in advancing the Kurdish issue in the middle east especially in northern Iraq.
- 4- The establishment of the federal system in Iraq and adopt a federal choosing represent realistic solutions to solve the Kurdish problem at the moment.