

Summary

We tried in our marked message (the role of national committees in imposing international humanitarian law – comparative study) to show the importance of national committees in helping countries for full achieving of their commitments we started our research in defining the national committees by finding a concept for these committees and specify their characteristic and the periods that passed in when created , then we worked an differentiating then from other national committees like human rights committees which applying the international humanitarian law in unexperienced way and those experienced and societies which observing the execution of inter national treaties ,then we clarify the gools that work to achieve and its relationship with inter national committees and organization as well as local and regional where we noticed that importance in its work and invention that we clarified and its uariation amoug countries we noticed there are many kinds acoording to different law structures for each country and we found that most of these committees form by excutive authority decision .and uniqlyin in some countries by legislative authority and that leads to weaken its work and full filling duties in a right way in relative to its membership we find that the authorities concerned with humanitarian international law are represented that gives it great ability in its wark , the presidency is also different ,in some countries the goveruments take the presidency or by its ministeries

, in their countries, the presidency of committees been given to authorities that responsible for applying the humanitarian international law, here we mean the the national assemblies of red crossent and mean wish have the suitable experiance in that feild that make then gualified to success in work esspcially the head of committee represents it in the international conference, we saw as well that national committee move toward forming secondary committees take respousibity of legislation ,puplishing and training or to protect cultural properties , then we showed its tasks and we saw that mast national committee limit in job in decesions or the laws in which it formed and this grant it the suitable ability to achieve these tasks successfully then we mentioned the work methods of national committees , and we found that cooperation between local and international institutions.

That lead to develop its work and gaining good experience in the process of applying humanitarian international law , then we mention to the experiancese of formation the local committees in the Jordan , Egypt, and Salvador , regarding these countries important role in applying the humanitarian international law and compare these committees with iragi experience and we had some notices on its formation especially the membership because the formation decision had mentioned its members names where it supposed to assign the represented authorities and give them the freedom to choose those who represent , then we finished our research with a conclusion contains some results that we conclude then gave some suggestions that may lead to develop its work .
